KEYMACRO is a simple keylogger and macro recorder that runs silently in the background. It records mouse, keyboard, and text entries made on the computer, in addition to the number of mouse clicks and keystrokes. You can capture any keyboard macro (hotkeys) or mouse macro (windows hotkeys, program shortcuts), and even set your own. You can then replay them to quickly repeat any repetitive task or to automate a task. The recordings are saved in.txt or.html formats, and can be emailed or transferred to a portable device. It is completely silent and does not interfere with any software. In addition to this, it includes the possibility of saving mouse and keyboard screenshots. KeyMACRO is compatible with most windows versions (7, 8, and 8.1), including x64 bit. Requires Windows 98/ME/2000/XP/Vista/7/8/8.1/10. A powerful Internet Protocol (IP) filter for Windows that blocks website and other undesired websites. You can block websites by IP or domain name, or by any other criteria, and the connection can be re-established once you have identified the undesired content. You can then easily block access to them. Additionally, you can specify which applications can access the Internet, and which ones should not be allowed to access the Internet. You can even make exceptions for those that are known to be trustworthy. The Internet Connection Manager also enables you to restart networking services and disconnect from the Internet, as well as restart the PC. You can also quickly identify and block malicious software and spyware, such as malware and adware. Instructions for setting up and using the IP filter: Go to the IP Filter screen. Click on the Add button. Choose your Internet connection method. A window will open and you will have to enter the details for your connection. This window will only display the IP addresses and other data for the currently connected networks, and it will not show the full list of Internet connections that your PC has, such as the TCP/IP, Internet, or other protocols. When you are finished entering the data, click OK. If you need to reset your IP filter, click the Reset button. If you need to reset the IP filter for a specific connection, select that connection, then click the Reset button. Click on the Add button. Choose your desired connection method. A window will open and you will have to enter the details for the connection. This window will only display the IP addresses and other data for the currently connected networks. Enter the name of the connection in the "name" text box, and enter the type of connection in the "type" text box. When you are finished entering the data, click OK. If you need to reset your IP filter, click the Reset button. If you need to reset the IP filter for a specific connection, select that connection, then click the Reset button. Click the Delete button to delete the connection. Note that you cannot delete the currently selected connection. Choose how to monitor connections: Use the "monitor" button to activate IP filtering for all connections, or deselect it to deactivate it. Use the "monitor" button to show the applications that are allowed to access
