I'm trying to register a COM component (that I don't own) and I'm receiving an error that states "Could not load type 'MyClass'. Module CATIDL_COMClassLib_TLB, DLL C:\WINDOWS\system32\catidl_comclass.tlb could not be found." I've tried registering using regsvr32, icacls, and regasm in the command line. Nothing. I've turned every permission on and off that I can find: registry, file, appdomain, code, delay load, and everything else. I'm not sure if there's a system setting preventing my machine from accessing this file, or the format of the file is wrong. Any ideas? A: Take a look at the assembly and class definitions of the COM component. They need to match the namespaces used in the assembly. Antigen-Specific Immunomodulation of Mycobacterium tuberculosis by Macrophages: Bridging Epithelial and Innate Immune Systems. Tuberculosis (TB) remains as one of the most prevalent human infectious diseases in the world. Tuberculosis primarily affects the lungs and is characterized by an intense inflammatory response. Macrophages are the first line of host defense against intracellular pathogens and are specialized to destroy bacteria, controlling the infection. The mechanisms by which macrophages restrict tuberculosis are unclear. Recent studies suggest that the interaction between macrophages and lymphocytes may play a key role in preventing the spread of infection. In the present study, we further investigated the role of IL-13 in the macrophage-mediated immune response to Mycobacterium tuberculosis infection. The
