Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor circuit design support device which is used to produce a semiconductor circuit design by using a VLSI (Very Large Scale Integrated circuit) design software designed by a user, and a semiconductor circuit design support method. 2. Description of the Related Art In a conventional VLSI semiconductor circuit design software, the length of wiring lines and the impedance value of each transmission line are sometimes calculated by using formulas and data for lattice diagram or diffusion diagram, but it is very difficult for a user to produce a VLSI semiconductor circuit design drawing (print) simply by using such data. Accordingly, there has been proposed a VLSI semiconductor circuit design support device which is designed to allow a user to produce an optimal design drawing simply by using a user's own drawing data (e.g., Japanese Patent Application No. Hei 6-162963). According to this VLSI semiconductor circuit design support device, a cell library is provided. The cell library includes a plurality of stored cell attributes which are data for designating a respective cell attribute. A printout line and column separation characteristic of
